
The Evolving Presidency is a collection of reprints of forty-five presidential documents tracing the office from its origins in the Founding Era to the midst of the Clinton-Lewinsky scandal. Included are many of the essentials, among them: The Federalist #70; the Pacificus/Helvidius debate; Lincoln's Letter to Albert Hodges; the discussion of presidential powers between Theodore Roosevelt and William Howard Taft; and such seminal Supreme Court cases as Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. v. Sawyer. It also contains less frequently seen documents that are interesting in their own right and serve as markers of critical events in the development of the presidency. These include, among others: the Tennessee General Assembly's protest against the congressional caucus system of presidential nominations; John F. Kennedy's letter to Krushchev during the Cuban Missile Crisis; and transcripts...
