One great strategy to start selling art online is to team up with an existing platform. This allows you to take advantage of an existing audience as well as existing sales tools, without the need to develop neither by yourself. Each one of these platforms is completely unique and some of them might not be suitable for your art practice. If you are focusing on fine art, maybe selling prints is not a good idea or if you are a pop artists maybe creating a merchandising line is a good move.
