Abstract:
The disaster of the destruction of the U.S. 8th Army at the end of November, 1950, driven by the blind ideological excesses of the China Lobby and their allied anti-Communists, contributed to an American "national panic" by the conclusion of the year. Caught in the sweep of the panic, American foreign policy and domestic security decisions during the ensuing months further entrenched ideological extremism and contributed to the hardening of the Cold War. This essay's analysis of the arguments and the decision-making processes following the Chinese route of the U.S. 8th Army in 1950 reveals that lessons not learned then presaged the later replication of similar errors.

American Tragedy dc.title: An American Tragedy dc.type: Print-Paper dc.type: Book. Addeddate. 2017-01-17 14:03:01. During the 1950s, the United States was the world's strongest military power. Its economy was booming, and the fruits of this prosperity--new cars, suburban houses and other consumer goods--were available to more people than ever before. However, the 1950s also saw great conflict. The nascent civil rights movement and the crusade against communism at home and abroad exposed underlying divisions in American society.
