'Labor and Monopoly Capital' has been criticized for being out of touch with modern labor problems. Critics have attacked its narrow focus on craftwork labor and his belief that all work is being degraded by industrialism. Despite changes in the workplace, Braverman's main points are still true.