The degenerative diseases such as heart disease, diabetes, and cancer -- caused by our modern lifestyle and diet, and environmental pollution -- have had all the attention in recent decades, leaving infectious disease somewhere in the dim past, conquered long ago by the mighty antibiotic drugs. But we have forfeited our protection by squandering these "miracle" drugs, using them carelessly, and creating superbugs, now resistant to antibiotics. We have forgotten that the worst pandemic in history was caused by an influenza virus - - killing 20 million people.

Ronald Klatz, MD, DO and Robert Goldman, MD, DO, PhD, in their new book Infection Protection, remind us that the specter of epidemic contagious disease may be revisiting us in the near future. Some, like malaria and tuberculosis, are reemerging because they've become resistant to commonly used drugs. However, new viruses, like Ebola and Hantavirus have appeared since the 1970's. Legionnaires, HIV Lyme Disease, and new variant Creutzfeldt-Jakob, are all with us now.

The first chapter of this book begins with Bioterrorism, and the many possible agents which could be used against us....
