Abstract / Summary

Description from Publisher: Sixty years after the first ascent of Mount Everest, this unique book of letters celebrates, in a very personal way, this most majestic of mountains. With exclusive access to the private archives of pioneering New Zealand climber George Lowe, this is a welcome tribute to an unsung hero. The conquest of Everest in the summer of 1953 was one of the twentieth-century's greatest triumphs of exploration. George Lowe's exploits on the mountain would become legendary. He was one of the lead climbers, forging the route up Everest's Lhotse Face without oxygen, and later cutting steps for his partners up the summit ridge. In this touching book, a trove of unpublished letters from the Lowe collection are brought together for the first time, to describe the day-by-day moments of this historic expedition as never before. In clear and elegant prose, this is a unique testimony of a superlative human achievement.

Letters from Everest is exactly that: a collection of unedited letters written back to family in New Zealand by George Lowe, a member of the 1953 expedition led by John Hunt that first conquered the world’s highest peak. It is not only about climbing at altitude, its techniques and dangers. It also deals with the logistics of portering tons of equipment, of relationships between the thirteen westerners Introduction by Huw Lewis-Jones. Letters from everest. Chapter one. Chapter two. Huw Lewis-Jones. The first ascent of Everest in the summer of 1953 was one of the twentieth century’s great triumphs of exploration. Its symbolism as a human achievement, perhaps more so than its usefulness, means that it will always be remembered fondly, often proudly, by those who were alive when word of the success spread across the world.
