And how will you remember me, my child? Redefining fatherhood in Turkey

Gary Barker
Deniz Dogruoz
Debbie Rogow

Document Type
Case Study

Publication Date
2009

Abstract
This issue of Quality/Calidad/Qualité profiles the AÇEV Father Support Program, a series of 13-week-long support groups for fathers across Turkey. Fatherhood (and men’s roles in the lives of children in general) is an ideal starting point for engaging men in gender equality for two key reasons: most men want to be involved in the lives of children, whether their own biological children or younger siblings, nieces, or nephews; and responsibility for the care of children is at the heart of gender inequality. The program reached nearly 10,000 men, teaching them about their role in the development of their children and encouraging them to spend quality time with their children. As one father explained, “[I went] for my children, for their futures and so they might contribute to humanity. I wanted to learn effective ways to raise them.”

DOI
10.31899/pgy3.1026

Language
English

Comments
Issue no. 19 of Quality/Calidad/Qualité, a series of case studies of high-quality, innovative programs in sexual and reproductive health.

Recommended Citation

Project
Adolescent Girls' Programming: Community of Practice
some more of that take. Yes, Turkey is treated to an abundance of redrawn and recategorised states, but many of them also have an issue with the government. Turkey was in a very unique situation in 1936, and I really wanted the player to feel like they were playing a pivotal part in Turkey’s nation-building process. All the paths are there: two non-aligned paths, two fascist paths, two democratic paths, and a communist path.

Let’s dissect it a little! The tree is broken up in a way that should feel rather interconnected, and that’s because of Turkey’s unique political situation. I think you will find lots of things you like. About Being a Father. No word makes me happier than the word “daddy” uttered by one of my children. – Michael Josephson. We never know the love of a parent until we become parents ourselves. a Father so that his child would have something mythical and infinitely important: a Protector, who would keep a lid on all the chaotic and catastrophic possibilities of life. – Tom Wolfe. Father! – to God himself we cannot give a holier name. Fatherhood is a gift that I will always treasure. The gifts I treasure are my children.

To take them to school, help with homework, go to teacher conference.